Leila S. Chudori's Home (translated by John H. McGlynn) circles around a black day in Indonesian history, while not revealing much about what happened on September 30, 1965. Instead, it details the long aftermath of the violence and the violent, repressive crackdown on communism through the lives of Dimas Suryo and his family.

Love this review. 'Pulang' is the first Leila S Chudori's book I've ever read. It really was satisfied my curiosity over her works. However it was kind of a bit downgrade when I read her other works afterwards. 'Pulang' certainly has a better literary quality than her short stories collections. Like Liked by 1 person
