Looking at another example, we find that when an aqueous solution of barium chloride (BaCl_2) is added to an aqueous solution of sodium sulfate (Na_2SO_4), a white precipitate is formed (Figure 3). Treating this as a metathesis reaction, the products are BaSO_4 and NaCl . From Table 1 we see that only BaSO_4 is insoluble.

PART I: METATHESIS REACTIONS The driving force for metathesis reactions is the removal of ions from solution. Therefore, to predict the direction of a metathesis reaction one simply determines the degree of removal of ions from solution by the reactants and products. Prediction products is trivial:

In this paper, we describe a simple aqueous metathesis reaction which has produced two new rhabdophane-type lanthanide monothiophosphate hydrates, $LaPO_3 \cdot xH_2O$ and $NdPO_3 \cdot yH_2O$. One of our goals is to demonstrate the similarities and differences between our new rare earth oxythiophosphate materials and the known rare earth phosphates.
