SOLUTION: Use the discriminant to determine whether the following equations have solutions that are: two different rational solutions; two different irrational solutions; exactly one rational.

Terminology note: Rarely will you find a quadratic with purely imaginary roots. A quadratic that does not have real roots generally has complex number solutions which have a real part and an imaginary part. Hence, to say that a quadratic has "two different imaginary solutions" is almost always incorrect.

Rational solutions. Often the solutions to quadratic equations are rational numbers, which are integers or fractions. The requirement for the solution to be an integer or fraction is that  $\sqrt{b^2 - 4ac}$  is a whole number.

Solve the following equation: When there are variables in denominators, we then will have certain values which can cause division by zero. Whichever method one uses to solve a given rational equation, one will, at some point, get rid of those denominators. In other words, at some point, one will, in effect, make those division-by-zero problems...

Summary. An important step in solving rational equations is to reject any extraneous solutions from the final answer. Extraneous solutions are solutions that don't satisfy the original form of the equation because they produce untrue statements or are excluded values that make a denominator equal to 0.

Solve and eliminate any extraneous solutions. And what they mean by extraneous solutions are, in the course of solving this rational equation right here, we might get some solutions that if we actually put it into the original problem would give us undefined expressions. And so those solutions are ...
